

David Davis & The Warrior River Boys
Didn't He Ramble: Songs of Charlie Poole Quote Sheet

The Bluegrass Situation premiered the album stream.

“Ultimately, there’s no greater proof of Poole’s relevance to modern music than the fact that Bob Dylan cited him in his acceptance speech when awarded his Nobel Prize for Literature. Loudon Wainwright famously covered Poole on his own album High, Wide and Handsome. Yet there’s little doubt that Didn't He Ramble provides the most significant homage to him yet. As Davis himself remarks in the liner notes, there’s nothing that says one can’t stay true to the original incarnation and not keep current at the same time. With this particularly inspired effort, he’s managed to do both.”

-- Lee Zimmerman, Bluegrass Today

“Far and away, the best project I’ve heard from these guys. Sonically beautiful, but not so polished the edge is gone. Feels like the perfect balance to me. If they don’t like this, well, they don’t like bluegrass.”

--Terry Herd, Bluegrass Today

“The new Carlie Poole tribute is nothing short of a masterpiece! As an old time and a bluegrass fan, I must say I’ve not ever heard a better and more sensitive bluegrass treatment of that music, ever.”

--Carl Goldstein, WVUD and Delaware Valley Bluegrass Festival

“Didn’t He Ramble: Songs of Charlie Poole is more than a welcome return; this album allows the listener to travel back in time and witness bluegrass’ evolution from old-timey string band and blues foundations to the music we embrace today. More than academic exercise, Didn’t He Ramble: Songs of Charlie Poole is an exemplary example of modern, traditional bluegrass.”

--Donald Teplyske, Fervor Coulee

“This night was as much fun as you can have without ‘getting into trouble’. David & The Boys are just a treat to hang out with... true gentlemen with a great sense of humor. David Davis is a very real hidden treasure in the world of music today. Give his new album Didn’t He Ramble: Songs of Charlie Poole a good listen. This is a special album that will stand the test of time.”

-- Lynda Weingartz, CEO - AirPlay Direct